Cordova, Granada and Ruesca
Are About to Fall into Red
Hands, Madrid Claims

DESTRUCTION RAMPANT

Franco's Moroccan Rebels
Move Northward; Loyalists
Besiege Cordova

By International News Service

Hurled against the steel center of the Rebel foreign legion in western Spain, one column of a dual government counter-offensive today was reported turned back with two hundred and fifty slain, west of Badajoz. In a series of Loyalist drives, insurgents bombed Somo Sierra, and Irun, and government shells rained destruction in Granada, where five tons of bombs fell near the Alhambra; Cordova, Huesca, Badajoz and Terifa.

While General Francisco Franco's Moroccan rebels moved northward in two ranks from Cordova and Caceres, Loyalists besieged Cordova. Cordova, Granada and Huesca are about to fall into Red hands, the government at Madrid said.

German and Italian aircraft were used in the bombardment of Loyalists in the Guadarrama mountains, according to a foreign report. Re-opening the drive on Irun, the Rebels were only three miles distant.

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
MADRID, Aug. 12—(INS)—From the Moorish turrets of the historic Alhambra through the breadth of Spain to the seacoast at Irun, bombardments blasted on eight cities today in four Rebel offensives and as many Government counter-drives.

Before dawn the attack on Irun, which controls the road to San Sebastian, was reopened by the insurgents, their artillery thundering from the hillsides and their infantry advancing through the ravines from their overnight bivouac, only three miles off.

Government spokesmen here, however, insisted they could hold Irun.

Cordova, besieged by Loyalists emerging from Burcia, was subjected to a heavy artillery and aerial bombardment, and in raids on Granada, Loyalist shells came close to the Alhambra, and one aerial bomb is reported to have hit the Washington Irving Hotel, named after the noted chronicler of the Alhambra.

Temperance Union Members Hear Report on Conference

An interesting meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held last evening at the home of Mrs. J. R. Hendricks. Seventeen members and three guests were present.

In the devotional service, Mrs. A. B. Sands read some of St. Paul's letters to Timothy, describing the perilous times so similar to those of this day, "when men were lovers of false treasures, rather than lovers of God." Interesting items from the five-state conference at Ocean Grove were reported by those who attended the sessions on July 16th. Mrs. William Hendricks, a visitor, told of the success of a protest by her home union to a large Pittsburgh firm which was exhibiting a modern home, in which was displayed a liquor cabinet. In answer to the protest, this was later replaced by a tea service.

Readings included articles from a New York newspaper, in which Dr. S. S. Goldwater described the alarming increase of alcoholic cases admitted to Bellevue Hospital, the increase being from 7,000 in 1934 to more than 12,000 in the current year. The wide advertising of liquor in magazines and newspapers was deplored.

Vocal solos by Mrs. Mary Du Hamel pleased. Refreshments of fruit juices and wafers were served by the hostess.

The play, "The Sow's Ear," is a comedy-farce concerning a wage made by two wealthy Americans that a very common cigarette girl could be made over into a lady. The complications that set in during the chrysalis offer many hilarious situations. Woodrow.

Mr. Woodrow will present two more plays with the Sarobia Players to complete the present season. The lady in question in "The Sow's Ear" will be played by Olga Bloom. Anthony, the Pygmalion of the comedy, will be portrayed by Walter Grindrod with Mary Myers, Shirley Copeland, David B. ## NEW DEAL EXPENDITURES BURDENING FUTURE GENERATIONS

(Reprinted from the Newark Star-Eagle)

The worst of the New Deal is yet to come. The tremendous Federal debt piled up in the last four years is yet to be paid.

The Roosevelt Administration spends on an average of $22,000,000 a day. It collects only $11,000,000 from all sources. This means that each day it saddles the remaining $11,000,000 on future generations.

Enormous New Deal taxes, most of them hidden, have already raised the cost of living to a point where the average family is barely able to stretch its money over the week.

Sales taxes have increased the cost practically of everything the ordinary man buys.

Corporation taxes, passed on to the consumer, have pushed prices higher.

The heavy tax burden placed on manufacturers has kept them from expanding their plants and increasing employment and wages. But the bill has been only half paid.

Despite the huge taxes, the high cost of living, and the low wages that New Deal policies have brought, and with 11 million still unemployed, only $1 has been taken in by the Government for every $2 paid out.

That leaves a debt of billions and billions of dollars that the youth of the country will have on their shoulders for years to come. It is a debt which they and their families will have to pay.

It means that in years to come they will not only have to support their own Government but that they will have to pay half the cost of a foolish Administration of the past as well.

The debt stands today at over 33 billions of dollars. They will have to pay it, whether they realize it now or not.

Yet how many of these young people did the New Deal consult before pouring out their money in unparalleled waste? Many of them were not of age at the time of the last election, and so had no chance to control the course of the Government.

Those who were voters, the New Deal has shamelessly betrayed. It has completely broken its promises made in the 1932 platform, and has strewn behind it a record of useless spending unequalled by any modern government.

More than a million young voters have become of age each year that the Roosevelt Administration has been in power. In November they will take part in their first Presidential election.

Much of the course of the future rests in their hands. They will be placed in a critical situation this year.

The country stands at political crossroads.

On one side lie an ever increasing public debt, state-controlled industry, violated personal liberty.

On the other side lies a return to the freedom that has made America known the world over as the land of opportunity. With it lies lowered taxes, making more money available for industry to increase employment and raise wages.

The first road is Roosevelt's. It leads to a government of hypocrisy, and to a Congress which shamelessly surrenders its power to an autocratic Chief Executive. It leads to Fascism and dictatorship, with restraints on personal liberty.

The second is Landon's road. It offers the voters a return to the plain, honest government of prosperity. It offers lowered taxes, a balanced budget and an end to government meddling in private affairs.

Every youth in this country deserves the chance to make an honest living in the way he wants to.

He needs no Government to tell him how much corn he shall raise, or what he shall charge for lead pencils or how many shoes he shall produce in his factory.

The New Deal has tried to do this, and wants to continue trying.

If the present high industrial taxes were cut in half, and the Government would move out of private business, manufacturers would be able to increase employment and raise wages. Lowered personal taxes would let the people buy more, and would result in lower prices. The country would be on the road to prosperity almost overnight.

THIS IS WHAT LANDON WOULD DO.

The more than four million young voters who take part in their first Presidential election this year have that choice before them.

They will have their chance to answer the New Deal in November.

They will be able to stop the increasing debt for once and for all, and to return to sound, free prosperity with Landon and Knox.

UNUSUAL APPROACH TO CAMP SITE PROVES REAL THRILL FOR RESIDENTS OF EDDINGTON; SPENT DELIGHTFUL TIME IN THE TIOGA STATE FOREST

Automobile Abandoned Half-Mile From Cabin—Cage Suspended On Cables Carried Campers Over Pine Creek—Scenery "All the Eye Could Wish For"

EDDINGTON, Aug. 12—A week's camping trip spent in the Tioga State Forest, about 75 miles north of Williamsport, brings back a wealth of interesting facts from Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold English, Eddington, and Lee J. Pennepacker, Philadelphia, who have just returned from a vacation sojourn in the Leonard Harrison State Forest Park in Tioga county.

Approach to the cabin by auto, where the campers lodged, ended about one-half mile from the trail. From there the machine had to be abandoned and the hike on foot began. The travelers approached the cabin by walking down a 700-foot incline which took a half hour. The trip up the path, known as Turkey Path, took about 45 minutes. After the descent was made there still remained about a quarter of a mile and in this distance was a stream to be crossed known as Pine Creek.

Here the campers embarked on a cage running on two cables suspended over Pine Creek. The car, with a three-person capacity, runs over the creek for a distance of more than 50 feet and then the final path to the cabin begins.

To the Englishes and Mr. Pennepacker this mode of transportation was new and thrilling. The only drawback, according to Mrs. English, was when the rope by which you pulled the cage across the creek became wet. When this happened, the ride across became work for the navigator.

But outside of this difficult method of approach to the cabin the Eddington residents were much enthused over the natural beauties encountered in this section of Pennsylvania.

"Let every admirer of outdoor beauty go some time to Leonard Harrison State Forest Park in Tioga County," said Mrs. English. "Standing upon a little lookout rock, he will find a sheer drop below him of hundreds of feet, and look with awe into that mighty chasm yawning at his feet. Far beneath winds the picturesque Pine Creek seeming at the distance only a miniature brook, and beside it what looks like a toy railroad train, as it puffs along the stream. Then upon lifting the gaze to

U. S. To Remain Neutral

Washington, Aug. 12—The American Government will maintain a policy of "scrupulous non-intervention" in Spain's civil war.

This was made plain to jittery European powers today in a neutrality proclamation. Inspired by President Roosevelt, the precedent-shattering word reiterated the promise the United States has of remaining aloof in entanglements.

Receipt of a bid from the French government would have put this nation in an embarrassing position of having to reject it formally.

Instead the Government pronouncement was made by acting Secretary of State, William Phillips, in a notice.

CONSIDER DEVELOPMENT OF THE DELAWARE BASIN

Federal, State, Interstate and Local Activities To Be
Co-ordinated

PREVENT POLLUTION

HARRISBURG, Aug. 12—The co-ordination of federal, state, interstate and local activities in water planning and development of the Delaware River Basin are under consideration at present according to an announcement by Thomas A. Logue, secretary of Internal Affairs, and chairman of the Interstate Commission on the Delaware River Basin.

Steps are first to be taken toward prevention and abatement of pollution, it is claimed.

The commission, which includes seventeen members and represents Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Delaware, is the outgrowth of the Regional Conference on Problems of the Delaware River Basin held in Philadelphia in April under a call issued jointly by the Pennsylvania Commission on Interstate Co-operation and the Council of State Governments.

Commenting on the organization of the commission, Secretary Logue said:

"The Interstate Commission on the Delaware River Basin is designed to put into effect a program which we hope will correlate and harmonize the view points and recommendations contained in the various surveys and studies of the Delaware River made during the last fifty years. The combination of Federal, State and interstate agencies is significant and it is our hope that, with the additional co-operation needed from local governments and from private agencies interested in the problems, a harmonious and practical program of action will result."

As its first objective the commission will consider the abatement and prevention of water pollution in the Delaware and its tributary drainage basin. Already a study of legislation in the four states involved is under way at the commission's headquarters in Philadelphia. The commission plans to prepare a legislative program or submission to the legislatures of the four states in 1937.

Complete Ground-Work, Flood Control Program

By Frederick N. Polanin

HARRISBURG, Aug. 12—(INS)—As Pennsylvania prepared to welcome President Franklin D. Roosevelt who comes here tomorrow to inspect the flood-stricken areas, State authorities today were completing the ground work for a comprehensive flood control program.

When the nation's chief executive arrives in Pennsylvania with an entourage of army engineers and flood control groups, he will find the Commonwealth moving quickly to prevent recurrence of the St. Patrick's Day disaster by paying the way for a co-operative program with its sister states and the federal government.

Preliminary plans for an extensive flood-control survey have already been completed. Charles E. Ryder, chief engineer of the forest and waters department announced.

Further, he revealed that co-operation with U. S. Army authorities in conducting the survey has already been assured in the Susquehanna river basin following a conference yesterday with Lieut. Col. E. J. Dent, U. S. District Army Engineer, of Baltimore.

Similar arrangements, he said, whereby the state and federal government can work on a more efficient basis, are expected shortly for the Delaware and Ohio river basins.

ROADS OR RESTRICTION

Having made a survey, Fortune magazine comes to the conclusion that half of the three-million-mile highway system on which the United States has spent fifteen billions of dollars is "unfit for modern motor traffic."

Evidently that conclusion is based largely on the conception that the average driver is not constituted to handle with efficiency and care the high-powered car of today and that the best of highways were constructed only for 30-mile-an-hour traffic.

Fortune may be right. And then again it may be wrong in assuming that the only real cure for present conditions is a rebuilding of highways on the modern scale which calls for divided lanes of travel, underpasses and overpasses for all intersecting traffic, impinging lanes for entrance or exit and all that sort of thing. That, of course, is all desirable. But that, equally of course, leads to greater speed and consequently greater danger, for if the driver is to remain an unqualified operator no amount of road space will assure safety from his vagaries.

So we have a notion that for some years to come we will have to get along with roads as they are. The public is not likely to scrap a fifteen billion dollar plant willingly or gladly just because a comparatively small percentage of those who use it are of moronic development. Rather it will resist, if it insists on anything, that the first effort shall be directed towards development of measures that will restrict the full freedom of use. Later on, perhaps, there will be greater inclination to build roads that cost, say, $100,000 a mile or more.

WILHELM TO ENGLAND!

London has received reports from Doorn, Holland, that former Kaiser Wilhelm II. of Germany wants to visit England for the coronation of King Edward VIII. next May. Wilhelm, it seems, would like to see the British crown placed on the head of his first cousin's son, despite nostalgic longings which the ceremony might stir in the breast of the former wearer of a different crown.

The former kaiser, furthermore, believes that a sojourn at Bourne-mouth, English seaside resort, would benefit his health. If he is to make the trip, Wilhelm must get the consent of the Dutch and the British governments. Probably the Dutch would interpose no objection to their longtime royal guest's temporary departure. The probable attitude of the British government is not indicated in London dispatches.

The mere fact that Wilhelm wants to go to England is proof that much water has gone over the international dam since Lloyd George won the post-armistice election on a "hang the kaiser" platform. But the fact that no one knows what may happen in Europe between now and coronation day, next May, stresses the perilous power now in the hands of Wilhelm's remote successor, Adolf I.

A rumor that the St. Louis Browns' ball park is haunted has been disproved. Investigation shows it was a nosy out-of-town fan.

Tip for success story: Hunt up some of the radio amateurs who got the gong and went on and up to become competent truck drivers.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

Having struck oil, the quaint Jake Tysons leave their Texas home to introduce their lovely daughter, Vernon (called "Maggie" back home), to New York society with the aid of their socially prominent (though impoverished) cousins, the Rushingtons. Sadie Tysons hopes for a brilliant match for her daughter, but Vernon's thoughts are with Terry Shannon, a young engineer she met on the train. Nan Rushington—Vernon's 18-year-old, ultra-modern cousin—hopes to better her own financial status by being nice to the Tysons. Nan becomes the loss of her father's fortune which prevents her from financing the divorce of her latest crush, "Sugar" Sarrail. Had her mother been alive Nan, in all probability, would not have led such a ruddy life. Her father was too taken up with his business worries to bother with Nan's escapades, although he disapproved of her gay career. Nan takes Vernon to have her hair hennaed and a complete beauty treatment. Vernon emerges a vision of loveliness. "You've got to glitter! If you don't register at the start—you're finished before you've begun!" stressed Nan. And "glitter" Vernon certainly did!

CHAPTER VII

They were passing a large and elegant store on the Avenue, and Nan suddenly halted her cousin with an ecstatic squeal.

"That gorgeous pancake hat—the one in hunter's green, with the feather! It was just made for you with your brand-new shade of hair! Let's go right in and get it, Vernon darling!"

"But—"

"Come on. You've simply got to cut a dash when the gang see you! They'll all be in the Fizzly Club—that's where we're going to lunch—I want you to be an absolute knock-out, Vernon!"

Vernon followed her electric, determined little cousin through the great swing-doors and up to the spacious millinery department.

The hat was brought from the window. It was marked $30.

Vernon tried it on. She was a little nervous about the price. But when the French milliner placed it on her head at a fetching angle, it was terribly becoming to her.

When they were seated in a taxi, and Nan had given the driver an address in the East Fifties, Vernon could see herself reflected in a strip of mirror, enchantingly pretty with her new shade of hair whose tendrils curled around the brim of the tiny modish hat.

Several taxis and private cars were lined up before the grilled entrance of the Fizzly Club. Elegantly dressed girls and smart-looking men were entering its portals—one by one, or two by two, cautiously admitted. A tiny observation window was set in the door from which a pair of keen eyes scanned the customers before they were permitted to enter.

But Nan and Vernon didn't have to wait. They were admitted immediately. "Hello, Mac, old scout! How's trade?" Nan winked at the doorman impudently.

The little foyer was so dimly lit that for a moment Vernon could see nothing.

Nan, however, was throwing greetings right and left into the intriguing gloom. Gradually the figures of very smartly attired young women shaped themselves. "They're waiting for tables or for men. Place full up as usual," whispered Nan importantly.

She knew her way about. She piloted her cousin through heavy swinging doors into the quaintest little barroom. It was crowded.

People were lined three deep in front of a long counter. Behind it were three men in long white coats, like surgeons. Their hands flashed with lightning speed as they jerked the ice into long glasses. Cocktails were shaken nimbly in big metal containers. A splash from one bottle, a dash from another—then soda—a slice of orange, of lemon, of pineapple, a couple of cherries.

Around two sides of the room, which was not large, were set little tables for two, covered with cloths in red and white checker. More than twice as many people as there was ward, giving a little squeal of excitement. "Hello, Sugar darling! Just in the nick of time! Have a spot with us!"

The man with the bold black eyes and the smart English tweeds contrived to give Vernon a second meaningful look as he shook hands with her at Nan's introduction. His name was Sarrail. He had soft white hands. His head was too small for his height. Vernon had the impression there was something a little furtive about him.

But he was well-bred, and despite the weakness of his chin—

"She's like Galsworthy's monkey, grabbing the fruit of pleasure—" space for, crowded there too. Smart, befringed young girls, and young men whose appearance suggested there wasn't a care in the world. Many of them greeted Nan, but their eyes curiously appraised the newcomer, Vernon.

"You're making a hit, old dear," vouchsafed Nan, boldly thrusting her way through the phalanx by the bar, and ordering a couple of dry Martinis. "Three-quarters of the gang are upstairs. We're a bit late for lunch."

Vernon made a pretence of sipping the bitter potion in her small glass. Was this what handsome Terry Shannon had meant on the train yesterday, when he had slammed the ways of Park Avenue? But she wasn't going to be a prude. She was quite enjoying this new experience. The beauty that Monsieur Bonaire's operators had bequeathed her this morning was augmenting the thrill.

Who was that long, lithe, aristocratic-looking man who had just entered? He wore faultlessly-fitting English tweeds, and had sleepy black eyes, which widened in a kind of surprised pleasure as they lighted on Vernon. . . .

They were bold, handsome eyes. They seemed to say: "Hello! Who are you? You're beautiful!"

Nan swung around, following Vernon's glance. She darted forward, giving a little squeal of excitement. "Hello, Sugar darling! Just in the nick of time! Have a spot with us!"

The Tioga State Forest is rapidly becoming a public recreational region for the people of Pennsylvania. Here may be found some of the majestic scenic views that the eye could wish to see. Many permanent camp sites have been leased within the forest where citizens of the State have erected summer homes and hunting lodges.

This forest, so named because of its location within the county of Tioga, and for many years one of the most important lumbering regions in Pennsylvania, contains about 100,000 acres. Of this tract there are about 128 acres in the Leonard Harrison Park. Many miles of State Forest roads and trails have been built, making the forest accessible to the public.

'ODDIES' BLUDGEON WAY TO FIRST PLACE STAND

The Odd Fellows bludgeoned their way into first place in the Bristol Twilight League last night when they handed the Hibernians an 11-3 lacing on the Landreth ball diamond. It marked the first time this season that the Hibs were replaced at the top of the league standing.

Two bad innings, one for Roy Devlin and the other by Dave Ennis, gave the victory to the Oddies. Devlin aided his own downfall with his wildness. Ennis was socked hard for four runs in the sixth. The climax of the Radcliffe Street boys' rally in the fifth was a four-bagger from the bat of Jimmy Cooper with the sacks loaded. The winners amassed a total of ten hits.

While the two Hibernian hurlers were being massacred, Jake Praul had an easy time in subduing the Hibs' batters. He was a bit shaky at the start but settled down and allowed but one hit in the final five frames. In the last half of the fifth, his mates began to throw the ball around but by misusing managed to give the Corson streeters a pair of tallies.

It was Jake Praul who started the six run uprising by drawing a pass from Devlin. W. Ritter attempted to sacrifice and fled out to Clay. Davis dropped a hit in center. Andy walked and the sacks became populated with Odd Fellows. Fred Hibbs also was given a complimentary ticket to first and Praul counted. Jimmy Cooper caught hold of a Devlin pitch and whammed it into deep right through the fence for a home run, clearing the bags. Leo Hibbs was passed. Ritter singled, scoring Hibbs. This was the signal for Devlin to come out and he was replaced by Ennis. Ennis pitched to Benny Praul who lined to Billy Thompson. Thompson's throw to Zeffries doubled Ritter.

The Hibs became threatening in their part of the inning for with two gone, Benny Praul errored on Ennis' grounder and then committed his second boot on Thompson's roller. On Mulligan's smash to Praul, Ritter failed to receive the throw, two runs scoring. Joe Roe hit to Cooper who erred but Mulligan went out at third.

Sends Piece of Rope, Used in Execution, To Elks

Elks of Bristol Lodge, No. 970, are in receipt of gifts from a former Bristolian, Julian C. McLaughlin, who is now a sergeant in the department of police, Tucson, Arizona.

The gifts from Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin include: A boot-shaped "flower pot," formerly a nest of a "wood-pecker" in Herron Town, which birds, according to Mr. McLaughlin cut holes in the giant cactus, "and when it heals leaves all sorts of shapes;" a fine specimen of a cactus to plant in the same; and a piece of rope. The rope, states the former Bristol man in his interesting letter, is a portion of that used in hanging Earl Gardner, the Apache Indian slayer of his wife and baby, who was hanged in Arizona July 13th.

The letter was accompanied by newspaper clippings telling in vivid manner how the Indian was cheated of a quick death, when he struck the side of the execution chamber, and dangled for 33 minutes before being pronounced dead.

LAWRENCE AND GREEN ENTER THE THIRD ROUND

TRENTON, N. J., August 12—Staving off what looked like defeat in the opening games, and calling on speed and power that their opponents could not match, enabled Nelson Green and Herb Lawrence, the latter the recently crowned singles champion of Trenton, to defeat their opponents to enter the third round of the men's city doubles tennis championship matches on the Cadwalader Park courts last night.

The highly favored Bristol boys were caught off balance by the clever opening plays of the veterans, Lou Stewart and Rue Brearley, but the local boys came through to win, 7-5, 6-4.

The game was probably one of the most interesting of the series last evening, in spite of the fact that Stewart and Brearley almost caused an upset. Starting fast this pair ran up a 5-2 score before the Bristol pair could get its shots working.

Finally the local racquet wielders managed to even the count at 5-5 and then by blasting the ball and taking advantage of every opportunity managed to come through the winners in the set, 7-5.

The last set seemed certain to go to the Bristol pair after they had run up a 4-2 lead, but again the veteran Stewart and Brearley played clever ball and evened the count at 4-4. A rally on the part of Green and Lawrence finally brought them through to victory, 6-4.

Tonight in the third round matches on the Cadwalader courts the doubles team of Green and Lawrence meet Frank Wetzel and Jim Waldron.

The defending champions, Leon Levy and Abbie Rednor, played brilliant tennis to eliminate without the loss of a game the team of Charles Donnelly and Frank Rue last night.

REPAIRS TO GRANDSTAND, MT. HOLLY, ADVANCING

MT. HOLLY, N. J., Aug. 11—Good progress is reported on the work of repairing the grandstand at Mt. Holly fair grounds, by Johnny Hicks, of the Interstate Speedway, Inc.

The structure, which has been renovated and repaired, is now being painted. Painters this week started applying the first coat to the new window sashes which soon will be installed, and the floors in the building have received a prime coat of oil preparatory to the application of deck paint.

The new benches and seats are ready to install, the stairways and treadways have been repaired and new railings constructed. The force of workmen will be enlarged next week to rush the improvements to completion in time for scheduled racing and sporting events early in September.

The track has been widened and nine inches of surface material will be applied before it is put into use.

Give Plaintiff 15 Days To File More Complete Claim

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 12—Carl B. Watson, the plaintiff in a suit for $10,000 over the water system in Edgehill Gardens, filed against the Borough of Morrisville, has been given 15 days by the Bucks County Court of Common Pleas to file a more complete statement of claim.

In asking for a more specified statement of claim, Borough Solicitor Willard Curtin desires to ascertain the exact amount of water main on the Edgehill section, which Watson claims is rightfully his, and which he contends the Borough of Morrisville has appropriated to its own use.

The Edgehill Gardens tract, which is a part of Lower Makefield Township and adjoins Morrisville Borough on the north, was developed about 15 years ago by the late A. F. Robertshaw. Later, Morrisville officials were asked to connect the water mains on the tract with the purpose of furnishing water to the homes. Watson, who acquired the balance of the tract held by Robertshaw, holds that Morrisville appropriated the water system and as a result he is now asking $10,000, the value of the mains on the tract.
